REGIONAL HEALTH CONNECTORS

What is a Regional Health Connector (RHC)?

- A resident of the community who works to improve the coordination of systems that keep us healthy
- Builds and strengthens networks of primary care, public health, human services, and community organizations working to improve health.
- Selected and hired by community-based health organizations throughout the state.

What does an RHC do?

- Connects primary care with community-based behavioral health and social services
- Develops a local priority project to advance community health
- Partners with clinical quality improvement teams to help practices prepare for new models of care and reach their goals
- Recommends reliable resources to improve health outcomes

How do RHCs work with you?

- Connects you with partners interested in reaching similar goals
- Engages you in developing and measuring projects that address what keeps us healthy in and outside of the doctor's office.
- Identifies innovative action steps for your practice or organization.
